Portfolio Selection Technology is allowing our customer advisors to connect with financial information sources in ways never before possible. But, not just any tools will do for institutional investment managers who aim to be rainmakers for their organization. Often, it's today's investment research departments that seek-out the technologies that provide Chief Investment Officers and Treasury Officials with the agility they need to keep pace with choosy and changeable corporate CEOs seeking alpha and higher expected investment performance.

Terrence Shepard, our renowned investment research analyst and special guest speaker, will discuss four ways to ensure that your investment portfolio has a silver lining.

You'll learn how to:

- Select which elements of the portfolio selection process are right for your organization.
- Integrate financial technologies and processes to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of your in-house investment team.
- Ensure that you have the data and data access needed to get the most efficient stock, bond and derivative instrument selections.
- Decipher which equity and debt sector trends are worth watching and what to do about them.

We invite all interested parties to take advantage of this important web cast opportunity designed to help you improve your overall investment portfolio performance with the latest investment analytical technologies, now available, as we all move forward in an uncertain global environment.

All the best,

Graham Roberts , CEO, Locker Capital Management
